

Summer Ethics Fellowship in Journalism

So rarely do working journalists step back and debate the ethical consequences of their decisions. FASPE has made me not only a better reporter, but also a more thoughtful person.

Rachel Gross, Associate Web Editor, Smithsonian.com

FASPE Journalism (Fellowships at Auschwitz for the Study of Professional Ethics in Journalism) is a fully-funded two-week summer program that uses the conduct of journalists in Nazi Germany as a launching point for an intensive study of contemporary journalism ethics. FASPE Journalism is predicated upon the power of place. Fellows visit Auschwitz and other sites in Germany and Poland where they consider how to apply the lessons of history to journalism's ethical challenges.

In 2017, the program will take place from Sunday, May 21 to Friday, June 2. (Fellows are expected to arrive in Europe by Saturday, May 20.) All program costs are covered, including round-trip travel from New York to Europe, European travel, lodging, and food. FASPE Journalism Fellows travel and share some seminars with Fellows in the FASPE Business and Law programs.

FASPE Journalism is open to current graduate students and working journalists who received an undergraduate degree between May 2012 and May 2016 or a graduate degree between May 2015 and January 2017.

To learn more about FASPE and to apply, please visit: www.FASPE.info.

FASPE programs are non-denominational.

Candidates of all religious, ethnic, and cultural backgrounds are encouraged to apply.
